

VETERAN SUCCESS STORIES

ADAM DRAIME
Pest Management Professional,
Bruce Terminix Company

Q: What was your primary occupation in the military?

My primary occupation in the USMC was a field radio operator. I was attached to an infantry unit and my job was to maintain and operate all communication equipment.

Q: What are you currently doing?

I started with Bruce Terminix Company nearly two years ago and currently work as a Pest Management Professional in our Northwest Greensboro branch.

Q: What attracted you to the pest management industry?

What attracted me the most to the pest control industry was the unknown of what was around the corner, as far as insects are concerned. I love the fact that every stop is different which brings a level of excitement to each stop. There will always be pest which makes this job stable and that is important to me.

Q: How did your experience in the military prepare you for this career path?

My experience in the military helps me on a daily basis. The military taught me how to be confident in myself which makes me a better service provider to our customers. It taught me leadership skills which I use daily to help motivate my team. I never forget where I have been and what I have accomplished, which keeps me motivated and constantly striving to better myself!

ABOUT PESTVETS

PestVets was created by the National Pest Management Association in 2014 as part of its commitment to engaging veterans in their successful transition to a productive and rewarding career in the pest management industry. To that end, PestVets actively promotes the recruitment of veterans to member companies and supports those recruitment efforts through various education and training opportunities.
